

Ted Seides, CFA

Ted Seides, CFA is the founder of Capital Allocators, an ecosystem that includes podcasts, gatherings (Capital Allocators Summits and Capital Allocators University), and advisory to managers and allocators.

He launched the Capital Allocators podcast in 2017. The show reached 13.5 million downloads in December 2022 and has been recognized as the top institutional investing podcast. In March 2021, Ted published his second book, Capital Allocators: How the world's elite money managers lead and invest that distills key lessons from the first 150 episodes of the podcast.

Ted previously worked under David Swensen at the Yale Investments Office, invested directly at three of Yale's managers, co-founded and served as Co-CIO of Protégé Partners, and made a famous bet with Warren Buffett.

Ted graduated Cum Laude from Yale University and received an MBA from Harvard Business School.
